

WHOLE NO. 9405.

INTERESTING FROM THE SOUTH.

REBEL OPINION OF UNION GENERALS.

Blackguardism of the Rebel Press.

What It Says of Tennessee Unionists.

Reported Arrival of Arms and Ammunition for the Rebels.

HOPES OF FOREIGN RECOGNITION.

The Second "Uprising of the People" Compared to an Eruption of Vesuvius.

Reported Arrival of a Large Quantity of Arms for the Rebels.

From the Richmond Examiner, June 5. The Knoxville Register has information, on authority that cannot be doubted, that two vessels arrived at a Confederate port on Saturday last with four thousand and six hundred barrels of powder, and one hundred and one hundred barrels of powder, and on Sunday two other vessels entered the same port with arms and ammunition, the number and quantity of which was not ascertained. These four vessels and two others arrived on our Atlantic coast, under convoy of the Confederate steamers, the Roanoke and the Danvers, and are reported as having been captured by the blockading squadron of Wilmington, North Carolina. The remaining vessels of the blockade are hovering somewhere on our extensive coast. The authorities on which we make these statements inform us that the whole number of arms and ammunition on these seven vessels was forty thousand.

Importance of Our Recognition by Foreign Powers.

From the Richmond Examiner, June 6. Immediately upon the breaking out of the rebellion, attention was directed to every channel and concentrated it upon the one all-absorbing topic of reliance upon ourselves alone. But the truth was, that we were not in looking abroad for aid, or in dependence upon others, but in too great confidence in ourselves. We held our breath, and waited for the result. We were not in looking abroad for aid, or in dependence upon others, but in too great confidence in ourselves. We held our breath, and waited for the result. We were not in looking abroad for aid, or in dependence upon others, but in too great confidence in ourselves. We held our breath, and waited for the result.

What the Rebels Think of the "Second Uprising of the People."

From the Petersburg Express, June 5. A very important step towards securing such a recognition abroad. Our independence once acknowledged, our adversaries of every clime and tongue must themselves with the non-combatants about "rebels," "traitors," &c., and come to regard the war in its true light as one of conquest and plunder. The world would look upon us as a nation, and we should be able to look upon our independence, as far as that was concerned, as an accomplished fact, and the war degenerate into a contest for territory. The rebels are well aware of this, and are doing all in their power to prevent it. They are doing all in their power to prevent it. They are doing all in their power to prevent it.

Rebel Description of the Leading Union Men of Tennessee.

From the Atlanta Intelligencer. AFFAIRS AT NASHVILLE—TRAITORS' CONVENTION. The Cincinnati Commercial of the 13th inst. contains the proceedings of the traitors' convention recently held in Nashville, and in which eighteen counties are claimed to have been represented. The meeting was held at a call for a convention of those who "are in favor of the restoration of the former relation of Tennessee to the Union." From the first, the object was to secure the support of the traitors, and to secure the support of the traitors, and to secure the support of the traitors.

Going to "Make Their Salt."

From the Richmond Enquirer, June 5. The Georgia Salt Manufacturing Company is about to be organized. The object of the company is to manufacture salt, and to manufacture salt, and to manufacture salt. The object of the company is to manufacture salt, and to manufacture salt, and to manufacture salt.

Perfectly Independent of Europe.

From the Atlanta Intelligencer, May 29. As for all Europe, we are perfectly independent of Europe. As for all Europe, we are perfectly independent of Europe. As for all Europe, we are perfectly independent of Europe.

Jeff Davis' Negroes on the Wing.

From the Richmond Enquirer, June 5. The Georgia Salt Manufacturing Company is about to be organized. The object of the company is to manufacture salt, and to manufacture salt, and to manufacture salt. The object of the company is to manufacture salt, and to manufacture salt, and to manufacture salt.

Whereabouts of Morgan, the Rebel Guerrilla Chief.

From the Richmond Enquirer, June 5. Col. Morgan and his gallant band seem to be the chief topic of conversation and gossip here. He was in the city a few days ago, and was seen by several persons. He was in the city a few days ago, and was seen by several persons. He was in the city a few days ago, and was seen by several persons.

Masters in Norfolk—Another Wool.

From the Richmond Enquirer, June 4. There is a rivalry among Lincoln's generals. It is a rivalry of shame. Envious of the honors of infantry, they are all striving to outdo each other. They are all striving to outdo each other. They are all striving to outdo each other.

NEWS FROM NORTH CAROLINA.

Arrival of General Burnside at the Fortress with Important Communications for the Government.

Skirmishing with Rebels Near Washington, N. C.

Fortress Monroe, April 9, 1862. Major General Burnside and staff arrived here at an early hour this morning, having come through the Albemarle and Chesapeake Canal in the small gunboat Fort Royal, leaving Newbern on Saturday. The Fort Royal came through both ends of the canal. The lower one, connecting the Currituck and Albemarle Sounds, has been obstructed by piles and sunken vessels, and previous arrivals by the inland route have avoided this by traversing the whole length of Currituck Sound. The progress of the Fort Royal was considerably delayed by the obstructions, but General Burnside succeeded in blowing them up and opening the canal. Norfolk was reached at midnight last night, and, after communicating with General Vicks and procuring a pilot, the Port Royal proceeded to this place. The object of the visit of General Burnside was to have important communication with the government. Having sent his despatches to Washington and obtained replies, he will return.

Obstinate Battle Between Fremont's and Jackson's Forces.

The Entire Rebel Army in the Engagement.

The Enemy Driven from their Position and the Field Occupied by Our Troops.

The Union Loss Between Five and Eight Hundred.

THE REBEL LOSS VERY HEAVY.

THE REBEL GENERAL ASHBY KILLED.

The Skirmish at Harrisonburg.

Our Washington (N. C.) Correspondence.

Washington, N. C., May 31, 1862. Governor Stanly's Popularity—His Staff Officers. The following was received at the War Department this forenoon: HEADQUARTERS, ARMY IN THE FIELD, HARRISONBURG, JUNE 7—9 P. M. Hon. E. M. STANTON, Secretary of War. The attack upon the enemy's rear of yesterday precipitated their retreat. Their loss in killed and wounded was very severe.

THE BATTLE NEAR UNION CHURCH.

General Fremont's Report of the Battle.

HEADQUARTERS, ARMY IN THE FIELD, CAMP NEAR PORT REPUBLIC, JUNE 8—9 A. M. To E. M. STANTON, Secretary of War. The army left Harrisonburg at six o'clock this morning, and at half-past eight my advance engaged the rebels about seven miles from that place, near Union Church.

Details of the Engagement.

FREMONT'S HEADQUARTERS, BATTLE FIELD, CAMP NEAR PORT REPUBLIC, VA., JUNE 8, 1862. General Fremont has overthrown the enemy, of whom he has been in pursuit for a week, forced him to fight, and has driven him from his chosen position with heavy loss.

Another Large Fire in Quebec—Over One Hundred Houses Destroyed.

Quebec, June 10, 1862. Another large fire broke out in this city early this morning. Over one hundred houses, principally of wood, the property of the workmen in the shipyards, have been destroyed.

The Steamship North America—The Hi-Bernian Outward Bound.

Quebec, June 10, 1862. The steamship North America, from Liverpool, with 310 steerage and 35 cabin passengers, passed Father Point at eleven o'clock last night. She reports passing yesterday the steamship Hi-Bernian, bound to Liverpool.

The Steamship Europa.

Boston, June 10, 1862. The steamship Europa, from Liverpool, via Halifax, will sail on Monday next at seven A. M.

General Milroy advanced his center rapidly, the artillery compelling the enemy to give ground.

General Schenck, on the right, twice drove back the rebels who attempted to turn his position.

Along our whole line our artillery, under Colonel Pilon's direction, was served with great vigor and precision, and the final success was largely due to its effect.

The enemy's center, General Milroy's, was broken up, and the rebels were driven back to their position.

Colonel Cluseret, with his weak brigade, took and held the center of the enemy's position, and his encampment there to-night.

Our forces were outnumbered at all points, but have occupied the rebel lines, and forced them to retreat.

The loss is heavy on both sides, the enemy suffering especially from our artillery. The Garibaldi Guard lost nearly two hundred; the Twenty-fifth Ohio sixty. The total loss is estimated at six to eight hundred in killed, wounded and missing.

Colonel Milroy advanced his center rapidly, the artillery compelling the enemy to give ground.

General Schenck, on the right, twice drove back the rebels who attempted to turn his position.

Along our whole line our artillery, under Colonel Pilon's direction, was served with great vigor and precision, and the final success was largely due to its effect.

The enemy's center, General Milroy's, was broken up, and the rebels were driven back to their position.

Colonel Cluseret, with his weak brigade, took and held the center of the enemy's position, and his encampment there to-night.

Our forces were outnumbered at all points, but have occupied the rebel lines, and forced them to retreat.

The loss is heavy on both sides, the enemy suffering especially from our artillery. The Garibaldi Guard lost nearly two hundred; the Twenty-fifth Ohio sixty. The total loss is estimated at six to eight hundred in killed, wounded and missing.

Colonel Milroy advanced his center rapidly, the artillery compelling the enemy to give ground.

General Schenck, on the right, twice drove back the rebels who attempted to turn his position.

Along our whole line our artillery, under Colonel Pilon's direction, was served with great vigor and precision, and the final success was largely due to its effect.

The enemy's center, General Milroy's, was broken up, and the rebels were driven back to their position.

Colonel Cluseret, with his weak brigade, took and held the center of the enemy's position, and his encampment there to-night.

Our forces were outnumbered at all points, but have occupied the rebel lines, and forced them to retreat.

The loss is heavy on both sides, the enemy suffering especially from our artillery. The Garibaldi Guard lost nearly two hundred; the Twenty-fifth Ohio sixty. The total loss is estimated at six to eight hundred in killed, wounded and missing.

General Milroy advanced his center rapidly, the artillery compelling the enemy to give ground.

General Schenck, on the right, twice drove back the rebels who attempted to turn his position.

Along our whole line our artillery, under Colonel Pilon's direction, was served with great vigor and precision, and the final success was largely due to its effect.

The enemy's center, General Milroy's, was broken up, and the rebels were driven back to their position.

Colonel Cluseret, with his weak brigade, took and held the center of the enemy's position, and his encampment there to-night.

Our forces were outnumbered at all points, but have occupied the rebel lines, and forced them to retreat.

The loss is heavy on both sides, the enemy suffering especially from our artillery. The Garibaldi Guard lost nearly two hundred; the Twenty-fifth Ohio sixty. The total loss is estimated at six to eight hundred in killed, wounded and missing.

Colonel Milroy advanced his center rapidly, the artillery compelling the enemy to give ground.

General Schenck, on the right, twice drove back the rebels who attempted to turn his position.

Along our whole line our artillery, under Colonel Pilon's direction, was served with great vigor and precision, and the final success was largely due to its effect.

The enemy's center, General Milroy's, was broken up, and the rebels were driven back to their position.

Colonel Cluseret, with his weak brigade, took and held the center of the enemy's position, and his encampment there to-night.

Our forces were outnumbered at all points, but have occupied the rebel lines, and forced them to retreat.

The loss is heavy on both sides, the enemy suffering especially from our artillery. The Garibaldi Guard lost nearly two hundred; the Twenty-fifth Ohio sixty. The total loss is estimated at six to eight hundred in killed, wounded and missing.

Colonel Milroy advanced his center rapidly, the artillery compelling the enemy to give ground.

General Schenck, on the right, twice drove back the rebels who attempted to turn his position.

Along our whole line our artillery, under Colonel Pilon's direction, was served with great vigor and precision, and the final success was largely due to its effect.

The enemy's center, General Milroy's, was broken up, and the rebels were driven back to their position.

Colonel Cluseret, with his weak brigade, took and held the center of the enemy's position, and his encampment there to-night.

Our forces were outnumbered at all points, but have occupied the rebel lines, and forced them to retreat.

The loss is heavy on both sides, the enemy suffering especially from our artillery. The Garibaldi Guard lost nearly two hundred; the Twenty-fifth Ohio sixty. The total loss is estimated at six to eight hundred in killed, wounded and missing.

General Milroy advanced his center rapidly, the artillery compelling the enemy to give ground.

General Schenck, on the right, twice drove back the rebels who attempted to turn his position.

Along our whole line our artillery, under Colonel Pilon's direction, was served with great vigor and precision, and the final success was largely due to its effect.

The enemy's center, General Milroy's, was broken up, and the rebels were driven back to their position.

Colonel Cluseret, with his weak brigade, took and held the center of the enemy's position, and his encampment there to-night.

Our forces were outnumbered at all points, but have occupied the rebel lines, and forced them to retreat.

The loss is heavy on both sides, the enemy suffering especially from our artillery. The Garibaldi Guard lost nearly two hundred; the Twenty-fifth Ohio sixty. The total loss is estimated at six to eight hundred in killed, wounded and missing.

Colonel Milroy advanced his center rapidly, the artillery compelling the enemy to give ground.

General Schenck, on the right, twice drove back the rebels who attempted to turn his position.

Along our whole line our artillery, under Colonel Pilon's direction, was served with great vigor and precision, and the final success was largely due to its effect.

The enemy's center, General Milroy's, was broken up, and the rebels were driven back to their position.

Colonel Cluseret, with his weak brigade, took and held the center of the enemy's position, and his encampment there to-night.

Our forces were outnumbered at all points, but have occupied the rebel lines, and forced them to retreat.

The loss is heavy on both sides, the enemy suffering especially from our artillery. The Garibaldi Guard lost nearly two hundred; the Twenty-fifth Ohio sixty. The total loss is estimated at six to eight hundred in killed, wounded and missing.

Colonel Milroy advanced his center rapidly, the artillery compelling the enemy to give ground.

General Schenck, on the right, twice drove back the rebels who attempted to turn his position.

Along our whole line our artillery, under Colonel Pilon's direction, was served with great vigor and precision, and the final success was largely due to its effect.

The enemy's center, General Milroy's, was broken up, and the rebels were driven back to their position.

Colonel Cluseret, with his weak brigade, took and held the center of the enemy's position, and his encampment there to-night.

Our forces were outnumbered at all points, but have occupied the rebel lines, and forced them to retreat.

The loss is heavy on both sides, the enemy suffering especially from our artillery. The Garibaldi Guard lost nearly two hundred; the Twenty-fifth Ohio sixty. The total loss is estimated at six to eight hundred in killed, wounded and missing.

Colonel Milroy advanced his center rapidly, the artillery compelling the enemy to give ground.

General Schenck, on the right, twice drove back the rebels who attempted to turn his position.

Along our whole line our artillery, under Colonel Pilon's direction, was served with great vigor and precision, and the final success was largely due to its effect.

The enemy's center, General Milroy's, was broken up, and the rebels were driven back to their position.

Colonel Cluseret, with his weak brigade, took and held the center of the enemy's position, and his encampment there to-night.

Our forces were outnumbered at all points, but have occupied the rebel lines, and forced them to retreat.

The loss is heavy on both sides, the enemy suffering especially from our artillery. The Garibaldi Guard lost nearly two hundred; the Twenty-fifth Ohio sixty. The total loss is estimated at six to eight hundred in killed, wounded and missing.

Colonel Milroy advanced his center rapidly, the artillery compelling the enemy to give ground.

General Schenck, on the right, twice drove back the rebels who attempted to turn his position.

Along our whole line our artillery, under Colonel Pilon's direction, was served with great vigor and precision, and the final success was largely due to its effect.

The enemy's center, General Milroy's, was broken up, and the rebels were driven back to their position.

Colonel Cluseret, with his weak brigade, took and held the center of the enemy's position, and his encampment there to-night.

Our forces were outnumbered at all points, but have occupied the rebel lines, and forced them to retreat.

The loss is heavy on both sides, the enemy suffering especially from our artillery. The Garibaldi Guard lost nearly two hundred; the Twenty-fifth Ohio sixty. The total loss is estimated at six to eight hundred in killed, wounded and missing.

Colonel Milroy advanced his center rapidly, the artillery compelling the enemy to give ground.

General Schenck, on the right, twice drove back the rebels who attempted to turn his position.

Along our whole line our artillery, under Colonel Pilon's direction, was served with great vigor and precision, and the final success was largely due to its effect.

The enemy's center, General Milroy's, was broken up, and the rebels were driven back to their position.

Colonel Cluseret, with his weak brigade, took and held the center of the enemy's position, and his encampment there to-night.

Our forces were outnumbered at all points, but have occupied the rebel lines, and forced them to retreat.

The loss is heavy on both sides, the enemy suffering especially from our artillery. The Garibaldi Guard lost nearly two hundred; the Twenty-fifth Ohio sixty. The total loss is estimated at six to eight hundred in killed, wounded and missing.

Colonel Milroy advanced his center rapidly, the artillery compelling the enemy to give ground.

General Schenck, on the right, twice drove back the rebels who attempted to turn his position.

Along our whole line our artillery, under Colonel Pilon's direction, was served with great vigor and precision, and the final success was largely due to its effect.

The enemy's center, General Milroy's, was broken up, and the rebels were driven back to their position.

Colonel Cluseret, with his weak brigade, took and held the center of the enemy's position, and his encampment there to-night.

Our forces were outnumbered at all points, but have occupied the rebel lines, and forced them to retreat.

The loss is heavy on both sides, the enemy suffering especially from our artillery. The Garibaldi Guard lost nearly two hundred; the Twenty-fifth Ohio sixty. The total loss is estimated at six to eight hundred in killed, wounded and missing.

Colonel Milroy advanced his center rapidly, the artillery compelling the enemy to give ground.

General Schenck, on the right, twice drove back the rebels who attempted to turn his position.

Along our whole line our artillery, under Colonel Pilon's direction, was served with great vigor and precision, and the final success was largely due to its effect.

The enemy's center, General Milroy's, was broken up, and the rebels were driven back to their position.

Colonel Cluseret, with his weak brigade, took and held the center of the enemy's position, and his encampment there to-night.

Our forces were outnumbered at all points, but have occupied the rebel lines, and forced them to retreat.

The loss is heavy on both sides, the enemy suffering especially from our artillery. The Garibaldi Guard lost nearly two hundred; the Twenty-fifth Ohio sixty. The total loss is estimated at six to eight hundred in killed, wounded and missing.

Colonel Milroy advanced his center rapidly, the artillery compelling the enemy to give ground.

General Schenck, on the right, twice drove back the rebels who attempted to turn his position.

Along our whole line our artillery, under Colonel Pilon's direction, was served with great vigor and precision, and the final success was largely due to its effect.

The enemy's center, General Milroy's, was broken up, and the rebels were driven back to their position.

Colonel Cluseret, with his weak brigade, took and held the center of the enemy's position, and his encampment there to-night.

Our forces were outnumbered at all points, but have occupied the rebel lines, and forced them to retreat.

The loss is heavy on both sides, the enemy suffering especially from our artillery. The Garibaldi Guard lost nearly two hundred; the Twenty-fifth Ohio sixty. The total loss is estimated at six to eight hundred in killed, wounded and missing.

Colonel Milroy advanced his center rapidly, the artillery compelling the enemy to give ground.

General Schenck, on the right, twice drove back the rebels who attempted to turn his position.

Along our whole line our artillery, under Colonel Pilon's direction, was served with great vigor and precision, and the final success was largely due to its effect.

The enemy's center, General Milroy's, was broken up, and the rebels were driven back to their position.

Colonel Cluseret, with his weak brigade, took and held the center of the enemy's position, and his encampment there to-night.

Our forces were outnumbered at all points, but have occupied the rebel lines, and forced them to retreat.

The loss is heavy on both sides, the enemy suffering especially from our artillery. The Garibaldi Guard lost nearly two hundred; the Twenty-fifth Ohio sixty. The total loss is estimated at six to eight hundred in killed, wounded and missing.

Colonel Milroy advanced his center rapidly, the artillery compelling the enemy to give ground.

General Schenck, on the right, twice drove back the rebels who attempted to turn his position.

Along our whole line our artillery, under Colonel Pilon's direction, was served with great vigor and precision, and the final success was largely due to its effect.

The enemy's center, General Milroy's, was broken up, and the rebels were driven back to their position.

Colonel Cluseret, with his weak brigade, took and held the center of the enemy's position, and his encampment there to-night.

Our forces were outnumbered at all points, but have occupied the rebel lines, and forced them to retreat.

The loss is heavy on both sides, the enemy suffering especially from our artillery. The Garibaldi Guard lost nearly two hundred; the Twenty-fifth Ohio sixty. The total loss is estimated at six to eight hundred in killed, wounded and missing.

Colonel Milroy advanced his center rapidly, the artillery compelling the enemy to give ground.

General Schenck, on the right, twice drove back the rebels who attempted to turn his position.

Along our whole line our artillery, under Colonel Pilon's direction, was served with great vigor and precision, and the final success was largely due to its effect.

The enemy's center, General Milroy's, was broken up, and the rebels were driven back to their position.

Colonel Cluseret, with his weak brigade, took and held the center of the enemy's position, and his encampment there to-night.

Our forces were outnumbered at all points, but have occupied the rebel lines, and forced them to retreat.

The loss is heavy on both sides, the enemy suffering especially from our artillery. The Garibaldi Guard lost nearly two hundred; the Twenty-fifth Ohio sixty. The total loss is estimated at six to eight hundred in killed, wounded and missing.

Colonel Milroy advanced his center rapidly, the artillery compelling the enemy to give ground.

General Schenck, on the right, twice drove back the rebels who attempted to turn his position.

The loss is heavy on both sides, the enemy suffering especially from our artillery. The Garibaldi Guard lost nearly two hundred; the Twenty-fifth Ohio sixty. The total loss is estimated at six to eight hundred in killed, wounded and missing.